Lifelong Faith Formation: Self-Assessment for Parishes

"Faith formation is a life-long process. It will not only embrace existing programs such as religious education and youth ministry, but also faith formation efforts yet to be developed. It will be directed toward all age groups as well as to the needs of various audiences."

Recommendations for Faith Formation from Diocese of Erie Pastoral Planning (2018).

Why use this self-assessment?

The model of lifelong faith formation was the response to the call articulated out of diocesan Pastoral Planning. The model, and this corresponding tool, allow us to see our people and their diverse needs across different stages of life through a standard metric. The self-assessment tool can be a checkpoint for parish ministries, providing a lens of how effectively they may respond to the spiritual development needs of your people.

By looking broadly at lifelong faith formation efforts at your parish, you can take time to celebrate and thank God for what is bearing fruit and notice any gaps. And, this tool can help you discern and hear God's call for your parish, including how to invest your energy into the most effective and high-impact ways to reach people whose needs are not currently met in intentional ways.

The self-assessment neither advocates for specific programs, nor claims that every parish should look the same. Rather, it provides flexibility to help you examine the needs, gifts, and growth areas for your parish family.

How to use this self-assessment?

First, complete the parish profile. Then, find a small review team whose knowledge represents an understanding of lifelong faith formation offerings at your parish. Next, establish your goals for the review process, and then review the assessment questions for each stage of life. How does your parish respond to the spiritual development needs of people in that group? Lastly, you are welcome to reach out to the Faith Formation team, either for help along the way, a macro-level review of your results, or planning how to move forward.

What time commitment will this require?

The amount of investment your team puts in will determine the level of impact of your work. We recommend 5-10 hours of group work, which can be done over of several weeks or months.

- 3, 1-hour conversations can probably give you a good sense of where your gifts and gaps are

- 4, 2-hour conversations (1 hour of discussion on each of the 8 stages of life) can open up deep dialogue on what lifelong faith formation looks like, and could look like, at your parish.
 - With either option: Plan on 1-2 hours of debrief and planning your next step, to help your fruitful areas continue to flourish and discern a gap you feel called to address.

What supports can I expect from Faith Formation at the diocese?

- Step-by-step tutorial videos that will walk you through each step of the process
- Support thinking through who the best team would be (i.e. Pastor + staff, vs. Pastor + pastoral council, vs. Pastor + a few knowledgeable parishioners)
- On-call support: Schedule a call to help throughout or after the process.
- Coming in early 2021, we will launch a new resource that can help you fill in gaps. The Best Practices Tool is a curated list of best practices for high-impact faith formation at each stage of life. Choose one of these 16 ideas (2 suggestions for each age group) for “plug-and-play,” to help build a new intentional ministry for a particular age group.

Parish Self-Assessment Process

The parish self-assessment process can be worked by the pastor or a minister alone, but the strongest results come from the work of a team.

The most effective parish self-assessment teams consist of a minimum of four members and include the pastor, staff, and interested parishioners. Members chosen for the parish self-assessment team should represent varied perspectives on parish life. Team members should come to the self-assessment with a whole-parish mindset. While they may understand or be invested in a particular ministry, they should be able to see the process from the perspective of the whole parish rather than from the perspective of the ministry. The ideal team member should be:

- HUMBLE - Ideal team players are humble. They lack excessive ego or concerns about status. They are quick to point out the contributions of others and slow to seek recognition for their own. They share credit, emphasize team over self, and define success collectively rather than individually.
- HUNGRY – Ideal team players are hungry. They are always looking for more—more things to do, more to learn, more responsibility. Hungry people rarely have to be pushed [...] to work harder because they are self-motivated and diligent. They are constantly thinking about the next step and the next opportunity.
- SMART - Ideal team players are smart. They are emotionally intelligent and have common sense about people. They tend to know what is happening in a group situation and how to effectively deal with others. They have good judgment and intuition around the subtleties of group dynamics and the impact of their words and actions.

(Humble, Hungry, Smart model comes directly from Pat Lencioni's The Ideal Team Player at <https://www.tablegroup.com/books/ideal-team-player/>)

Different types of members may be needed at various times in the self-assessment process. For example, strong involvement from teen parishioners may be needed in examining the parish's outreach and offerings for teens, while more involvement from parish leaders, such as parish council, could be used in analyzing the demographics and mission statement.

In general, when there is doubt about whether a certain individual should be involved in planning due to the size of the group, it is best to involve him or her. It is worse to exclude someone useful than it is to have one or two extra people in planning.

Parish Self-Assessment Team

There are different kinds of spiritual gifts but the same Spirit; there are different forms of service but the same Lord; there are different workings but the same God who produces all of them in everyone. To each individual, the manifestation of the Spirit is given for some benefit.

Shared Mission

Entrust your works to the LORD, and your plans will succeed.

Proverbs 16:3

Reflect as a team on your parish. Why is this self-assessment important? What do you hope will be different in your parish because of engaging in self-assessment and reflection? How do you hope that your parish can foster the personal and spiritual growth of parishioners in new ways?

The current mission statement for our parish is:

Review of Demographics

O Lord, you are my God, I extol you, I praise your name; For you have carried out your wonderful plans of old, faithful, and true.

Reference your local government and parish data for the following. The following data can help clarify any misunderstandings regarding the population of your parish and/or the general population in your area. A clear understanding of your demographics can help focus ministry and evangelization efforts. If data is missing or finding it is an undue burden, skip this portion and continue in the self-assessment.

Comment on 2 or 3 major trends that emerged as you reviewed and discussed demographic data.

¹ Parishes can use the US Census data at <https://www.census.gov/quickfacts/fact/table/US/PST045219> to find population breakdowns in their area. In-depth analysis of the population data listed in the census table, in addition to what is asked for in the parish self-assessment, may also point to ministry opportunities.

Guiding Questions

Moreover, God is able to make every grace abundant for you, so that in all things, always having all you need, you may have an abundance for every good work.

2 Corinthians 9:8

In the next section, you will focus on the spiritual and developmental needs of parishioners and analyze how the parish's ministry responds to them. There are common challenges and themes in faith and human development that generally occur for parishioners at similar times in life. Each challenge is an invitation from God to grow closer in relationship with him, to grow more fully into the person he created, and to grow in relationship with one's neighbor. These questions and challenges will be called spiritual invitations in the following text.

A chart will guide the team as they examine spiritual invitations that are common for each age group and determine whether the parish is meeting the needs for parishioners' growth in that area. An excerpt from the chart is given below as an example. The first column expresses a common spiritual invitation. The middle column unpacks the spiritual invitation and provides specific questions for the self-assessment team to consider. The third column provides a place for the team to answer the questions from the middle column. Provide concrete examples by listing ministries, resources, efforts in culture development, or available referrals currently offered at the parish.

Spiritual Invitation 1: Is being with God and His people a safe and happy experience?	How does the parish offer opportunities for young children to engage in faith and prayer in a fun and sensory way? Does our parish make parents of young children feel welcome, even in the midst of challenges that come with bringing young children to Church? Does our parish help parents introduce the faith and let small children become comfortable with Church persons, symbols, culture, etc.?	Evidence/opportunities:
		Ranking: 1 2 3

A parish helps its people respond to spiritual invitations adequately when there are specific opportunities for growth through a ministry or through deliberately fostered parish culture. After listing all the evidence for a spiritual invitation, rank the parish's ability to foster growth in this invitation on a 1-3 (low – average – high) scale.

You are asked to engage in open and honest discussion with members of your team to determine how your parish meets the spiritual invitations of distinct age groups in your community. Remember that your discussions should center on both evidence and data that substantiate your reasoning.

This time of self-reflection will highlight areas where parish ministry is strong and should be celebrated. Parish challenges will become apparent as you notice invitations that will require additional focus to attain. These challenges will be the basis for your goal setting in the future. Keep in mind that no parish is perfect. This assessment is intended to highlight areas where ministry is already strong and to showcase opportunities for parishes to grow and connect in ways they may not have recognized before.

Note: Many ministries have been changed or discontinued as a result of current public health concerns. Engaging in the parish self-assessment with what is currently offered helps a parish understand how they are reaching their people in real time.

Prioritize Challenges

But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, so that the surpassing power will be of God and not from us.

2 Corinthians 4:7

Review the challenges that you identified in your discussion of the spiritual invitations and opportunities in your parish. Identify the challenges most likely to have a significant impact on the growth and health of your parish and parishioners.

- Record the most compelling challenges that were discussed.
- Numerically rank the priority of each highlighted challenge in the right-hand column with (1) being the most significant challenge.
- Consider which challenges are urgent and translate into long-term goals.
- Decide with your team which of these challenges could best translate into a goal(s) for the next 12 months.
